

Stanley Glenn Hodges

(1943-2015)

By Jerry Long

GLENN HODGES is secretary of the Hancock County Historical Society and editor of the Society's quarterly newsletter. He is a graduate of Kentucky Wesleyan College and a former U.S Navy journalist, was a staff writer for seven years at the Owensboro Messenger-Inquirer and served in Kentucky state government as a public information officer. He has written several articles on Hancock County history that have been published in the Hancock Clarion's weekly column "So It's Been Told." Though Hodges is a native of Daviess County, his family roots are in Hancock County. His parents, Stanley Hodges and the late Helen Hatfield Hodges, were both reared in the River Road and New Chapel Methodist Church communities east of Lewisport.

From book, Fearful Times: A History of the Civil War Years in Hancock County, KY (Owensboro, KY: Progress Printing Company, 1986)

Hancock Clarion, Hawesville, KY, 14 August 1986:

Hancock's Civil War story in Hodges' book

The first history ever written about events in Hancock County during the American Civil War has been published by the Hancock County Historical Society and will be available to the public this week.

Historical Society President Horace Temple announced that the history can be ordered by mail from the Historical Society in Hawesville and will be on sale at the Society's booth at the Hancock County Fair today through Saturday.

The 90-page booklet, titled Fearful Times: A History of the Civil War Years in Hancock County, was written by Glenn Hodges, secretary of the Historical Society. It contains a reconstruction of events in Hancock County and the Green River region during the Civil War as they were reported by eyewitnesses and correspondents of newspapers in Cannelton and Evansville, Ind., and Owensboro and Louisville, Ky.

Produced in cooperation with Donn Wimmer, editor-publisher of The Hancock Clarion, the history includes four pages of photographs, and an index with more than 200 names of participants in the events covered, a majority of whom resided in Hancock County.

According to Hodges, the booklet reveals how Hancock Countians were violently split by the politics of the war, tolerated Union Army occupation, endured the social upheaval caused by the Federal government's enlistment of slaves, and survived the daily danger of being attacked and robbed by guerrillas.

Portions of the history include:

A detailed account of the murder of Thomas Hale at the hands of nightriders near Weberstown in 1863.

Memories of life in Hawesville during wartime provided by Anna Hawes, who as a child witnessed the shelling of the town by Union artillery and gunboats.

The exploits of Maj. Walker Taylor who, before coming to western Kentucky in 1864, had been a daring scout and secret service agent for the Confederate Army, and had schemed in 1862 to kidnap President Abraham Lincoln.

The history is climaxed by an examination of the final days and death of Bill Davison, the notorious Confederate guerrilla captain from Hawesville who was responsible for burning the Daviess County courthouse at Owensboro in January 1865.

Hodges has been secretary of the Historical Society and editor of its quarterly newsletter since April 1982. He is also chairman of the Society's historic site marker committee. He was a staff writer for seven years at the Messenger-Inquirer in Owensboro, is a former U.S. Navy journalist and has served as a public information officer in Kentucky state government. Though a native of Daviess County, Hodges' family roots go deep into Hancock County. He is a descendant of the pioneer Lewis and Greathouse families who settled in the Lewisport area in the early 1800s. His parents, Stanley Hodges and the late Helen Hatfield Hodges, both grew up in the River Road and New Chapel Church communities northeast of Lewisport.

READY FOR RELEASE—Glenn Hodges examines one of the first issues of his newly published 90-page booklet entitled: "Fearful Times: A History of the Civil War Years in Hancock County." The book contains the first ever history written about events in Hancock County during the American Civil War as reported through eye witnesses and correspondents of area newspapers.

—Clarion Photo

Hancock Clarion, Hawesville, KY, 14 April 1988

"Fearful Times" author to receive Historian of the Year honor

"Fearful Times" author, Glenn Hodges, has been named the seventh Historian of the Year by the Hancock County Historical Society. He will be honored at a dinner April 18 at the Hancock County High School. Previous historians of the year are James H. Fallin, Donn Wimmer, Mary Robertson, Rose Pell Henderson, Eli Gregory, and Dorothy Rees. This annual recognition is given to "one who has contributed toward the preserving of the history of Hancock County or whose efforts have made the history of the county richer."

Mr. Hodges' book, "Fearful Times" was recently reviewed in the Filson Club History Quarterly by Ronald R. Alexander of West Virginia Institute of Technology. Horace "Sonny" Temple, president of the Hancock County Historical Society pointed out that the review was indeed a very favorable one. The first printing of the book by the Society and "The Hancock Clarion" has sold out. A reprinting is now under consideration. Those interested in a copy should contact the Society or The Clarion.

Mr. Hodges has now completed a book on the pioneer Lewis family in Hancock County where he traces them from 1799 to 1888. Publication is scheduled for late 1988 or early 1989.

Steve Harmon, vice-president of the Society, said that reservations for the annual dinner honoring Mr. Hodges can be had by calling him at 295-3143 or Patsy Young at 927-8721.

WORK EARNS HONORS—Glenn Hodges has been named the seventh Historian of the Year by the Hancock County Historical Society and will be honored at the annual dinner April 8. Hodges is the author of "Fearful Times", an account of Hancock County's involvement in the Civil War. Hodges is an avid researcher of Hancock County and area history.

Family tree branches into history book

By Steve Thomas
Messenger-Inquirer

The book and television miniseries "Roots" inspired many people, including Maceo's Glenn Hodges, to trace their family trees.

Little did Hodges know when he began his search in 1980 that it would lead him to the original settlers of the Lewisport area in Hancock County.

"I didn't start out to write a book," Hodges said. "I started out to trace the family tree."

But in doing so, Hodges found stories begging to be told, which he has related in a 175-page book, "Daybreak on Old Fortification Creek: A History of John Lewis, His Family and Descendants." The book is published by the Hancock County Historical Society, for which Hodges is secretary.

Glenn Hodges

John Lewis is the father of Hodges' great-great-grandmother, Susan Rebecca Lewis Greathouse.

"Daybreak" covers a period between the 1780s and 1910, beginning with the lives and times of Lewis and his wife, Hannah. They were the first members of the family to come to Hancock County, settling on Old Fortification Creek in 1799. The stream is now known as Yellow Creek, and the site of the old settlement is on the Harold Wayne Newton farm two miles up river from Lewisport.

Hodges' principal research source was family letters. He describes in Hannah Lewis' words how she managed to survive and raise her seven children alone in the wilderness after her husband died in 1813.

"I fell in love with Hannah Lewis," said Hodges, 45.

When Lewisport was formed in 1839, it was named after the family. Publication of the book coincides with the 1989 celebration of Lewisport's sesquicentennial.

For Daviess County readers, John Lewis gives a description of the land at Yellow Banks, future site of Owensboro, which he explored in September 1799. There is also a story of a confrontation between Hannah Lewis and Amos Riley in Daviess Circuit Court in 1816 in a legal dispute over land in eastern Daviess County near Blackford Creek. Riley was later owner of the slave Josiah Henson, "Uncle Tom" in "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Also portrayed in the book is Dr. Francis Lewis, who began practicing medicine in the Troy Bend district in the 1830s. The author uses quotations to recount Dr. Lewis' study of a fever epidemic in Lewis Bottom in 1835.

See HISTORY/7B

MESSANGER-INQUIRER, Sunday, April 23, 1989

7B

HISTORY

Others in the book are William Berkeley Lewis, a cousin of John Lewis', and longtime friend and aide to President Andrew Jackson; and Joseph C. Lewis, who operated the family's country store at Adair in the early 1900s.

The book includes accounts of the flood of 1884 and the construction of the railroad through Hancock County in 1888.

It mentions many other first families who settled in the area, including the Chrislers, Greathouses, Emmicks, Thompsons, Lamars, Houses, Thrashers, Pates, Blincoes and Wilians.

Most of the letters Hodges incorporated into the book came from a collection at Duke University in Durham, N.C. He also drew from sources at other colleges, from county records, and from several private genealogical and historical collections.

Hodges began his research in 1980 after reading a letter by Dorothy Hodges Thrawley, published in the 1979 county sesquicentennial edition of The Hancock Clarion. Mrs. Thrawley was born in the Adair community and now lives in Black Mountain, N.C.

"Dorothy was really my inspiration for this project," Hodges said.

"She had researched the genealogies of the Lewis, Thrasher, Hodges and Chrisler families, and thought their story needed to be told."

In 1985-86, while working on the Lewis book, Hodges wrote "Fearful Times," the story of the Civil War years in Hancock County. Publication of that book led to his being named 1988 Historian of the Year in the county.

At the awards banquet last year, Thomas Emmick announced he would help the Historical Society publish "Daybreak on Old Fortification Creek," in memory of his mother, Elizabeth, who lived in Lewisport and was interviewed for the book. He provided the money to print the book. Mrs. Emmick was a descendant of the Lewis and House families.

"Without Tommy, it would have been difficult for us to produce this book," Hodges said. "I really appreciate what he did, because he enabled us to tell an important story."

■ The price of the book is $15, according to Historical Society President Horace Temple. He said it can be ordered by mail for $16 by writing the Hancock County Historical Society, P.O. Box 605, Hawesville, Ky. 42348.

State historical group honors two from area

Messenger-Inquirer

Two area residents were among historians honored Saturday at the annual awards program of the Historical Confederation of Kentucky in Frankfort.

Dorothy Gentry of Hartford, a founding member of the Ohio County Historical Society, received the Award of Distinction, the highest individual honor the confederation gives for work in historical preservation.

Glenn Hodges

Glenn Hodges of Maceo, secretary of the Hancock County Historical Society, received the local history publications award for his two books, "Fearful Times, A History of the Civil War Years in Hancock County" and "Daybreak on Old Fortification Creek, A History of John Lewis, His Family and Descendants."

Both of Hodges' books were published by the Hancock County Historical Society. He was presented the award "for the best publication(s) produced by an organization with a budget of less than $25,000."

Hodges' award is the fourth received by the Hancock County Historical Society in the past three years. In 1987 the Hawesville-based organization was awarded a national certificate of commendation by the American Association for State and Local History and also received the Kentucky Historical Society Award for outstanding efforts in preserving and interpreting local history. Last year Jack Foster of Hancock County received the Award of Distinction.

The National Society of Colonial Dames won the other local history publications award for an organization with a budget of more than $25,000. It received the honor for its booklet on Liberty Hall and the Orlando Brown House in Frankfort.

The Knox County Historical Museum won four awards in the overall competition, and the Jefferson County Office of Historic Preservation and Archives received three.

Hancock Clarion, Hawesville, KY, 6 October 1994:

First highway marker in Hancock County in 1964

Kentucky historical highway markers do not "just appear." The marker program goes back to 1949 and continued to 1962 under the Kentucky Highway Marker Committee and the Kentucky Highway Department. The program was then turned over to the Kentucky Historical Society with the cooperation of the Kentucky Highway Department. During the period 1949 through 1962, 175 markers were approved and erected. Number one was erected at Henry Clay's home, "Ashland," in Lexington.

The "Guide to Kentucky Historical Markers" (second edition) came out in 1985. It was sold out and revised in 1989. That also has sold out. Due to tight budgets in Frankfort, there is no idea at this time when it will be published again. Diane Wells, who has charge of this program in Frankfort, said some use the guide to plan their vacations. One family, she reported, decided to visit all of them. She asked the family to report any vandalism, damage, or anything else that would detract from their value in preserving the Commonwealth's history. The family has issued her periodic reports as they travel about.

Miss Wells said the processing of a marker from the idea to plaque requires many people and much time.

There is an advisory committee, a review committee, and an editing committee. That does not include 120 county highway marker chairmen through whom the local request must pass en route to Frankfort. That chairman is now James Fallin, who succeeded the late Judge Harry Black. These are the only two chairmen the county has ever had.

In Hancock County, Glenn Hodges has served as highway marker committee chairman for the Hancock County Historical Society for about 10 years. In fact, he is the committee. Either from his own research or from suggestions from within or Glenn Hodges, chairman of the Hancock County Historical Society's Historical Highway Marker program. He, working with county chairman James Fallin, has been able to obtain six markers for this county since 1984.

So It's Been Told

Footnotes to Hancock County history

By Jack Foster

without the society, he develops the wording and consults the society and James Fallin prior to submission to Frankfort.

Now to back up a bit to the first three markers approved and erected prior to 1984. Miss Wells says her file information is sketchy, but the marker commemorating "Lincoln's Acquittal" at the Pate House began when the then state chairman, W.A. Wentworth, suggested it. Judge Black submitted it. Perhaps someone can fill in the details. The second one, about the county's name, and which appears on the courthouse square, was also approved by Judge Black. The third one honored the first court proceedings in Hancock County at Utility. The record shows that the late Verne Griffin either approached the fiscal court or wrote a letter to the "Clarion" suggesting such a marker. It was approved and erected in 1979.

The next marker was approved in 1984 and marks the beginning of the Hodges-Fallin era. Both Hodges and Fallin have an abiding interest in all sorts of history but local history and Civil War history top both their lists. The 10-year period 1984-1994 will show six markers researched, approved, and erected in the county. In addition, a marker (not a Kentucky Highway Marker) was written and approved by Hodges and paid for privately and erected at the site of the old Beech Grove one-room school house on Muddy Gut Road east of Lewisport. It was paid for by Franklin Banks, an alumnus of this school, who suggested such a marker be put up at the site of each one room school house. This would prove to be a monumental task, but the society will listen if anyone has a suggestion.

Next week will be Chapter II about these markers.

Have you memories, pictures, or documents of days gone by in Hancock County you will share? Write to the Hancock County Historical Society, P.O. Box 605, Hawesville, KY 42348.

6 oct. 1994

Glenn Hodges, on right, and Jerry Long in the Kentucky Room at the Daviess County Public Library in Owensboro, KY. At reception for Shelia Heflin's retirement as director of the Kentucky Room on 23 October 2012.

Lewisport Cemetery, Hancock County, KY

OBITUARIES

Stanley Glenn Hodges

Stanley Glenn Hodges, 71, died Wednesday, May 20, 2015, in the care of Hospice of Western Kentucky. Born in Owensboro and raised in Maceo, Glenn was a published regional historian recognized for his account of the Civil War Years in Hancock and Daviess counties.

He was a journalist for more than 30 years. During his tenure at the Messenger-Inquirer, he reported on a wide range of stories relevant to major court decisions, the criminal justice system, economic development projects, the Kentucky State Legislature and prominent civic events.

He always spoke fondly of his two mentors at the Messenger-Inquirer. One was the late George Kerler, an editorial writer. The other was Herb Parker, a close friend and former managing editor of the newspaper.

Even when cancer made it increasingly hard for him to concentrate, Glenn maintained his interest in current affairs.

As a writer, Glenn had a self-imposed routine: He was determined to write at least several paragraphs of his memoirs each day. He began those memoirs with his childhood experiences on a Maceo farm and wrote feelingly of his relationships with his family. He also wrote with critical insight about contemporary America.

A graduate of Kentucky Wesleyan College and a veteran of the United States Navy, Glenn enjoyed listening to the stories of his older Hodges and Hatfield cousins and uncles, each of whom served in the military during World War II.

Glenn was an authority on the Civil War and toured many of its historic sites. He spoke with a historian's fervor of the day he stood on the artillery site at Oak Hill on the Gettysburg battlefield and imagined General George Pickett's anxiety just before his charge into the "159 guns that stretched in a long line from the Peach Orchard to Oak Hill."

A steadfast and faithful friend to all, Glenn always appreciated visits from his former co-workers Bob Bruck, Keith Lawrence, Suzi Bartholomy, Jim Pickens and Johnny Maglinger.

On a special occasion while bedridden at his home, Aloma Dew, co-chair of the Daviess County Bicentennial Committee presented Glenn with a numbered copy of "Daviess County: Celebrating Our Heritage." He and Mrs. Dew co-wrote a chapter in the book titled "The Civil War Years in Daviess County" and it was Glenn's expressed wish to view a copy of the commemorative edition before he died.

Whether it touched on local, state or national history, journalism, politics or his favorite major league baseball team — the New York Yankees — Glenn was a reflective and engaging conversationalist as well as a fascinating storyteller. His memory will live through his written words.

During the final months of his illness, Glenn was supported and comforted by the devotion and care-giving talents of his sister Shirley Bivins. She worked tirelessly with his care.

In addition to his sister Shirley Hodges Bivins, Glenn is survived by his niece Tracy Lynn (Reggie) Helm; his great-niece and nephew Tatum N. Wendt and Thomas Wendt III; and his many cousins, among them Gary (Jan) Hatfield, Linda (Wayne) Jolliffe, Janet Clark and Roy Hodges Jr.

Glenn was preceded in death by his loving and supportive parents, Helen Hatfield Hodges in 1974 and Stanley O. Hodges in 1996, as well as his brother-in-law, whom he considered a true brother, William "Billy" Bivins in 1976.

The funeral service for Glenn will be at noon Wednesday at Glenn Funeral Home and Crematory, where visitation will be from 4 to 8 p.m. Tuesday and after 10 a.m. Wednesday. Burial will be in Lewisport Cemetery. Expressions of sympathy may take the form of contributions to St. Jude Children's Hospital or Wounded Warriors. Messages of condolence and memories of Glenn may be shared at www.glennfuneralhome.com.

Bibliography of books and articles on local history by Glenn Hodges

Books

Fearful Times: A History of the Civil War Years in Hancock County, KY (Owensboro, KY: Progress Printing Company, 1986, 82 pages).

Daybreak On Old Fortification Creek: A History of John Lewis, His Family and Descendants (Owensboro, KY: Owensboro Publishing Co., 1989, 157 pages).

Articles

“Footnotes to Hancock County history” [Dr. Hardin Davison & Thomas Lowe], So It’s Been Told column, Hancock Clarion, Hawesville, KY, 24 May 1984 & 31 May 1984.

“Footnotes to Hancock County history: Guerillas carried out raids in Hancock County during Civil War, So It’s Been Told column, Hancock Clarion, Hawesville, KY, 7 June 1984.

“Footnotes to Hancock County history: The Guerilla Bill Davison – Hawesville’s Native Son”, So It’s Been Told column, Hancock Clarion, Hawesville, KY, 14 June 1984.

“Footnotes to Hancock County history: The great Maxwell – Lowe shoot-out at Hawesville”, So It’s Been Told column, Hancock Clarion, Hawesville, KY, 22 November 1984 & 29 November 1984.

“Bill Davison’s Owensboro Raid”, Daviess County Historical Quarterly, Daviess County Historical Society, Owensboro, KY, April 1986, Volume IV, 37-43.

“Little Yellow Banks”, Hancock Clarion, Hawesville, KY, Lewisport Sesquicentennial supplement, 29 June 1989, 2.

“Glenn Hodges recalls boyhood in Lewisport during 1950’s”, Hancock Clarion, Hawesville, KY, Lewisport Sesquicentennial supplement, 29 June 1989, 36.

“So It’s Been Told: In Hodges’ New Book – More Lewis history disclosed”, Hancock Clarion, Hawesville, KY, 12 October 1989, 2.

“So It’s Been Told: Hodges tells of violent shakers of 1811, 1812”, Hancock Clarion, Hawesville, KY, 9 November 1989, 2.

“So It’s Been Told: Earthquake of 1811 registered 6.5 on Richter scale”, Hancock Clarion, Hawesville, KY, 16 November 1989, 2.

“Tremendous quake of 1811 capped ‘year of wonders’”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 2 December 1990, 1A.

“Kentucky guerillas led Courthouse burning” [William Davison], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 3 February 1992, 1C.

“Confederate general used legendary tactic for 1st time in McLean” [Nathan Bedford Forrest], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 20 April 1992, 1C.

“Cloverport was once two towns”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 18.

“Hancock towns named for early settlers”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 19.

“Hancock man was pilot in most famous steamboat race ever” [John W. Cannon], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 19.

“Coal king in Muhlenberg since 1820”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 20.

“Calhoun named for ‘wild, rollicking’ lawyer”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 22.

“Ohio County had area’s earliest settlements”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 24.

“Wild west gunfighter Wyatt Earl had roots in Ohio County”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 24.

“Nuclear bombs fell on Breckinridge after accident” [plane crash], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 26.

“Murderous Attempt With an Infernal Machine” [Dr. Hardin A. Davison], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 27.

“Vicious Harpe brothers terrorized western Kentucky in the 1790s”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 28.

“Tar Springs doesn’t sound like a resort, but it was”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 28.

“Telephone operator a hero in Island fire” [Esther Brown], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 30.

“McHenry man was only player killed in major league baseball game [Ray Chapman], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 30.

“Muhlenberg mine disaster killed 34 men”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 31.

“McLean County dispute may have led Lincoln into law” [sic – should be Hancock County], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 31.

“Slave uprising led to execution of five blacks in 1826”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 31.

“Hardinsburg namesake built settlement on his fighting skills” [William Hardin], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 32.

“Historian chronicled Muhlenberg blacks” [Leslie Shively Smith], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Kentucky Portrait, 1792-1992 (special edition), 30 May 1992, 62.

“Water walker kept excitement afloat along Ohio River” [Charles Oldrieve], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 1 June 1992, 1C.

“Muhlenberg a general before a county”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 29 June 1992, 1C.

“Railroad delivered excitement in 1888”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 28 September 1992, 1C.

“Rebel guerilla stormed western Kentucky” [William Clarke Quantrill], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 30 November 1992, 1C.

“Residents struggled with land, Indians”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 21 December 1992, 1C.

“City 1st known as Yellow Banks”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Factbook '93 (special edition), 31 May 1993, 101.

“Book maps out history of Maceo, Yelvington”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 21 August 1993, 1B.

“Daviess County has colorful history”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 1994 Factbook (special edition), 5 July 1994, 108.

“Philpot resident researches, keeps history of town alive” [Larry Worth], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 9 August 1994, Community section, 5.

“History of Curdsville community is colorful patchwork”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 6 September 1994, Community section, 3.

“Birk City community boomed, slowed with oil”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 27 September 1994, Community section, 5.

“Community Memories: Knottsville community has long, colorful history in area”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 25 October 1994, Community section, 5.

“Community History” [Whitesville], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 6 December 1994, Community section, 5.

“Community Heroes” [Paul Haynes Cagle], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 6 December 1994, Community section, 2.

“Community Histories” [Rose Pell Henderson], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 3 January 1995, Community section, 2.

“Community History” [Masonville], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 3 January 1995, Community section, 3.

“Community Memories: Quiet streets of Hawesville once rang with sounds of gunfight” [Thomas St.Claire Lowe vs. Cicero Maxwell], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 10 January 1995, Community section, 2-3.

“Community Memories: Remembering Paul Cagle”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Community section, 7 February 1995, 8.

“Community History” [Thruston], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 14 February 1995, Community section, 3.

“Community History: Dublin Lane”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 14 March 1995, Community section, 5.

“Community Histories: Maceo and Yelvington”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 28 March 1995, Community section, 12.

“Community History” [Abraham Lincoln assassination], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 11 April 1995, Community section, 8.

“Community History” [The Hawes and Taylor Families], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 23 May 1995, Community section, 8.

“Community Histories: Murray and Pettit, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 11 July 1995, Community section, 8.

“Former Yellow Banks now 3rd largest city in state”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 1995 Factbook (special edition), 17 July 1995, 76, “Community Histories: Blue Ruin”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 25 July 1995, Community section, 8.

“Mickey Mantle : 1931-1995 – My memories of the Mick can’t be erased”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 14 August 1995, 3B.

“Community Histories: St. Joseph”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 29 August 1995, Community section, 8.

“Young Abe Lincoln still remembered in Hancock”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 12 September 1995, 1D.

“Stanley’s booming past”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 7 November 1995, 1D.

“Historic wreck part of railroad history in Daviess County”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 7 November 1995, 1D.

“All the marbles: Hancock County boy placed second in national tournament in 1925”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 28 November 1995, p1D.

“Home Sweet Sorgho: Daviess County community has thrived since 1869 by making the most of economic opportunities”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 12 December 1995, p1D.

“Honor and Villainy: Two Confederate leaders in western Kentucky used drastically different tactics in Civil War” [Capt. Bill Davison, Maj. Walker Taylor], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 26 December 1995, p1D.

“Cabin tombstone houses mystery” [Joe Aldridge, Hawesville Cemetery], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 2 January 1996, 1D.

“A Civil War Childhood: The Civil War – as seen through the eyes of a child in Hawesville – was a time of excitement, fear and fun, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 9 January 1996, p1D.

“The Real Mr. Weather Berry’ [Henry S. Berry], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 6 February 1996, p1D.

“The Road to Civil Rights” [Edward Claybrook], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 20 February 1996, 1D.

“A Battle All Their Own: They fought for a country that was not their own. They fought for rights that were not their own. They fought a battle all their own.”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 27 February 1996, p1D.

“The Teacher” [Mary Banks Perkins], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 5 March 1996, 1D.

“Road to Equality for Women Came Through Owensboro” [Susan B. Anthony], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 12 March 1996, p1D.

“A War Within The State: More than just a war between the states, the Civil War also divided neighbors”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 16 April 1996, p1D.

“Calhoun, Calhoon, Fort Vienna, Long Falls of Green River: McLean County community has had several names, identities since 1700s”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 30 April 1996, p1D.

“Southern Soldier’s Final Battle: Confederate captain who led raids during Civil War was fatally wounded in his native Hancock County” [Bill Davison], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 7 May 1996, p1D.

“An Officer And A Gentleman: Maj. Rice Evan Graves personified gallantry and courage of Southern soldier, on battlefield and off”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 14 May 1996, p1D.

“Daviess County History: Buffalo trail leads to new county”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Our Region ‘97 (special edition), 28 April 1997, 1.

“Owensboro’s planes, trains and automobiles”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Owensboro Centennial Celebration, 1797-1997 (special edition), 4 July 1997, 14.

“‘Owensborough’ government had ups, downs”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Owensboro Centennial Celebration, 1797-1997 (special edition), 4 July 1997, 16.

“Civil War Travels: Tour of American battlefields is sobering experience”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 24 August 1997, 1F.

“The shaping of a senator” [Wendell H. Ford], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Wendell Ford: A Life of Service (special edition), 16 January 1999, 6

“Leaving a Legacy: Owensboro native led the world in tobacco production” [Woodford Axton], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 7 March 1999, p3E.

“Courageous nurse sacrificed all: Clemmie Wolf fell victim to the flu epidemic she helped fight in 1917”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 11 April 1999, p3E.

“History: Owensboro’s War Hero – Lt. John Martin Spalding’s action on and after D-Day brought honor to him and his company”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 27 June 1999, 3E.

“Giant of Journalism: ‘Birdie’ Gasser became an Owensboro legend by talking about everyday people throughout career”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 25 July 1999, 3E.

“The Dream Lives On: Nebletts ‘did pretty good for a small town’ in aiding children, founding center”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 29 August 1999, 3E.

“Brilliant Businessman: Roy Burlew bought small plant, turned it into giant that employed thousands”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 3 October 1999, 3E.

“A Nation’s Grief: Newspaper employees struggled to get JFK assassination published”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 21 November 1999, 3E.

“Hi, Neighbor: Fiorella took a simple hamburger wagon and became a legendary restaurateur”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 26 December 1999, 3E.

“James H. Parrish: His Highs and Lows”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 19 March 2000, 3E.

“History: Memories of Vietnam” [Grady Harreld III], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 30 April 2000, 3E.

“Greatest of his time: Woodson owned, edited Owensboro Messenger”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Messenger-Inquirer 125 Years of service (special edition), 1 June 2000, 5.

“Building a foundation: S. W. Hager bought Inquirer in 1909”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Messenger-Inquirer 125 Years of service (special edition), 1 June 2000, 3.

“Horses reigned supreme in Ellis Park’s owner’s life” [James C. Ellis], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 3 September 2000, 4E.

“The day Justice Died in Hancock: Mob lynched black man in 197 for sexual assault on white girl; hanging ‘an awful sight’”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 17 September 2000, 3E.

“A Defining Moment: Truman whistle-stop visit to Owensboro helped shape 1948’s presidential upset”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 22 October 2000, 3E.

“Wartime Christmas” [WW II], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 24 December 2000, 3E.

“‘Human Landmark’: Former police chief Bidwell outlasted all his critics”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 11 March 2001, 3E.

“On The Air: Potters put Owensboro on broadcasting dial”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 29 April 2001, 3E.

“A Civic Star: Mike Callas came to Owensboro in 1908, had a lasting impact”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 10 June 2001, 3E.

“History: Waitman Taylor Sr. made lasting impression with his service to others – ‘Always For The People’”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 23 December 1901, 3E.

“A Mixed Legacy: Fred Weir was a good salesman but found trouble in mayor’s office”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 27 January 2002, 3E.

“Career of Good Works: Leroy Woodward: Record store founder had many talents”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 3 March 2002, 3E.

“A Horrible Night: Blast aboard steamboat between Cannelton and Hawesville killed 38 people in 1854”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 17 March 2002, 3E.

“Torn Apart By War: The Civil War drove wedge of fear and distrust between Cannelton, Hawesville”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 14 April 2002, 3E.

“Robert Shaw’s Rage: Hancock County shootings described as one of Kentucky’s most frightful tragedies”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 26 May 2002, 3E.

“History: Young Abe Emerges” [Samuel Pate House], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 23 June 2002, 3E.

“Building The A-Bomb: Owensboro’s John Swindell Wright had role in project that changed world”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 28 July 2002, 3E.

“History: Daveiss’ Finest Hour” [Joseph Hamilton Daveiss], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 1 September 2002, 3E.

“‘Forgotten Raid’: Rebel guerillas attacked Owensboro in 1864 with a vengeance”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 29 September 2002, 3E.

“Master Of The Big Top: Zachariah Terrell found his calling in the circus”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 20 October 2002, 3E.

“A Tale Of Our City: Did Charles Dickens really visit Owensboro?”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 1 December 2002, 3E.

“Piano Man ... And More: Dr. John ‘Knocky’ Parker mixed teaching and musical talent with a touch of mayhem”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 29 December 2002, 3E.

“Glory Days: Owensboro Football – Unbeaten 1917 team opened age of excellence”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 26 January 2003, 1E.

“Remebering ‘Uncle Remus of Owensboro’: A Notable Life” [Jim Johnson], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 2 March 2003, 3E.

“War & Family: Separated by WWII, Fullenwiders’ family ties were never broken”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 4 May 2003, 3E.

“Baseball Hero: Owensboro’s ‘Jughandle Johnny’ pitched in 1925 World Series” [John Morrison], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 22 June 2003, 3E.

“Journalist For The Ages: Friends, former co-workers remember George Kerler”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 3 August 2003, 3E.

“Victory Parade: Owensboro full of celebration after end of World War II”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 10 August 2003, 3E.

“Livermore Lynching: Is the infamous tale of the killing of William Potter fact or fiction?”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 5 October 2003, 3E.

“A Driving Force: William T. Stevenson’s affection for Owensboro helped land Texas Gas headquarters”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 30 November 2003, 3E.

“Suburb Market: Wyndall’s Foodland Stores Only One Part Of His Legacy - Wyndall Smith’s American Dream”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 25 January 2004, 1E.

“Pure Service: Three-time mayor helped build a more beautiful Owensboro” [Dr. James Hardin Hickman], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 22 February 2004, 3E.

“A Love Of Law: Owensboro’s Lucius Powhatan Little enjoyed notable career as lawyer, writer”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 2 May 2004, 3E.

“Always A Soldier: Hawes remembered for service in military, as Owensboro mayor” [Benjamin Walker Hawes], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 30 May 2004, 3E.

“Unforgettable Character: Friends, others remember former lawmaker, prosecutor Elmer L. Brown”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 8 August 2004, 3E.

“Circus: Terrell was one of America’s great showmen” [Zach Terrell], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Connections (special edition), 21 September 2004, 10.

“World War II: Spalding led his men onto bloody Omaha Beach” [John Martin Spalding], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Connections (special edition), 21 September 2004, 44.

“Baseball: ‘Jughandle’ Johnny was pitching ace in ‘20s” [Johnny Morrison], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Connections (special edition), 21 September 2004, 70.

“Hancock County History: Pate House was site of Lincoln acquittal”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Connections (special edition), 21 September 2004, 69.

“Unforgettable Team: Hicks and the Boys of Spring 1960 a pleasure to watch”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 3 October 2004, 3E.

“Hancock County Pioneer: Hard life put woman to the test” [Hannah Lewis], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 26 December 2004, 3E.

“Ohio County: Looking Back – Hardships, heroics mark decades of county life, “Circus: Terrell was one of America’s great showmen”, Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, Our Region - 2006 (special edition), 20 October 2006, 58.

“Present complex dates back to 1941” [Owensboro Medical Health System], Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY, 26 December 2007, 1A.

As a member of the Daviess County (KY) Bicentennial Committee he was co-author of the book, Daviess County, Kentucky (1815-2015): Celebrating Our Heritage (Evansville, IN: M. T. Publishing Company, Inc., 2015); compiled article on Boston (p26), Buzzard's Roost (p26), Knottsville (p30), Livia (p30), Maceo (p30), Masonville (p31), Pettit (p34), Philpot (p34), Sutherland (p39), Thruston (p39) and "The Civil War Years in Daviess County" (p61).

Daviess County Bicentennial Committee, December 2014: Bottom row (left to right) – Sr. Amelia Stenger, Aloma Dew, Lee Dew, Wesley Acton, Jerry Long. Middle row – Kathy Olson, Nancy Bradshaw, Sarah Patterson, Shirley Trunnel, Isaac Settle, Shelia Heflin, Forrest Roberts. Back row – David Smith, Whaylon Coleman, Ed Allen, Jim Lambert, Glenn Hodges, David Zachary, Grady Ebelhar.

Messenger-Inquirer, Owensboro, KY
20 May 2009, p1D:

Photo submitted by Glenn Hodges

Glenn Hodges is pictured with his dog, Rusty, on the porch of his home in Maceo in the late 1940s.