Kentucky Place Names, Robert M. Rennick (Lexington, KY: University Press of Kentucky, 1984), 229:

Pellville (Hancock): pehl/vihl (Pellville). This hamlet with po is on KY 144, 10 mi ssw of Hawesville. It is said to have been called Bucksnot for years until the po of Blackford—probably located on or near the creek of that name—was moved and renamed Pellville on May 23, 1868. The name Bucksnot traditionally refers to the tale of the pioneer who thought he heard a deer snorting in the brush by the side of the rd, while Pellville was named for Samuel B. Pell (1796–1864), a state legislator and long-term Hancock Co sheriff who often visited the place. 164, 262, 1332.

Hancock Clarion, Hawesville, KY, "So It's Been Told: Footnotes to Hancock County History", by Jack Foster, 2 August 1990 and 9 August 1990:

Guest columnist this and next week will be Mr. Oswald Jett, one of Hancock County's foremost historians. Born in Hancock County, Mr. Jett attended Pleasant Springs and Hawesville Grade Schools, graduated from Pellville High School in 1933 and graduated from University of Kentucky with history and journalism training. He now resides in Lexington and is retired from the United States Postal Service.

History of Pellville

By Oswald Jett

It is easy to see why most cities developed in their locations (beside a large stream, lake, or sea) but it's not always simple to understand why some prospered in growth and others didn't. Copious supplies of fuel and water, of course, guaranteed industrial growth and railroads and other transportation facilities had a large part in establishing settlements in the interior. Yet many ambitious hamlets failed to produce a population exceeding a hundred even if the census taker counted the dogs. One such settlement was called Pellville.

In frontier times the pioneers always looked for a dependable spring, easily available timber, and accessibility. Sometimes a village sprouted at the intersection of two trails, as a town first known as Cross Roads, at the crossing of an old buffalo trace with the Yellow Banks, Leitchfield road. It later became Whitesville. The nearby village of Pellville also developed on a buffalo trace, that connected Fort Hardin with Yellow Banks (Owensboro). Neither town was on a navigable stream but Pellville's large spring in the valley to the west helped attract pioneers to the settlement. What was the town's prospect? Pleasantly situated amid three impressive knobs, later to be known as the Pellville, Temple, and Stephens knobs, it was otherwise enclosed by wooded rolling hills and fertile valleys drained by tributaries of the Blackford and Panther creeks.

As in other communities, the first landowners invested in large tracts but did not live on them. The speculations in land that later became a large section of southern Hancock Co. began on May 17, 1789 when Hubbard Taylor was granted 7,522 acres (by Warrant No. 3789) of Jefferson Co., a rectangular area that included what would later be the sites of Pellville, Weberstown, and Floral, and reached beyond St. Lawrence into future Daviess Co. This was only part of Taylor's investments in the region, but he never moved into his western territory. He and wife Clarissa were residents of Clark Co. when they sold 200 acres in newly established Hancock Co. to Rev. Wm. Brown on July 1, 1829. This land was on the eastern boundary of the 7,522-acre tract. Between it and Pellville, David D. Noel, Sr. acquired a large acreage and lived on it.

The section of land that included the future town of Pellville was acquired by James and John William Shrader, who also never became residents. James and Mary Ann lived in Clark Co., Indiana; John W. and Barbara were residents of Oldham Co., Ky. The first large land holder who lived on his Pellville tract was William Temple (b. 1795 in Nelson Co.), the son of David Temple and Mary Decker. Alter Nelson Co. had been subdivided into several counties that included Bullitt, William migrated from the latter county, purchasing some 560 acres (in three plats) from William and Barbara Shrader, the land lying to the north and west of the future town. (Book 5, p. 219, Aug. 23, 1851, furnished by Mrs. Opal McDaniel of Pellville). Eventually, the Temple family lived on and owned all the land that was later incorporated into the town of Pellville.

Other early landowners included Alexander Wile, Christopher Barbee, James W. Snyder, William Obenchain, his son-in-law, Japeth Skinner, his brother, James G. Obenchain, William Hale, and Alfred Stinnett. Most of them, if not all, lived on their tracts. The Obenchains bought all their land from the Shraders, and owned the farm that straddled the Daviess-Ohio- Hancock County intersection after Hancock Co. was formed. Solomon Lyons also bought 108 acres from the Shraders, and in 1850 lived on his tract between David D. Noel and Pellville. To the south was the 200 acres of Tandy Morrison, who in turn was bordered to the south by Levi Voyles' 200 acres.

William and Susan Temple sold 6 or 8 acres to Pius Montgomery, the local, saloon keeper whose business helped to give the budding village a reputation for brawls and lawlessness. Montgomery then sold lots to James E. Stone (the longtime County Clerk), Wm. D. Mayhall, and Austin Montgomery. (Opal McDaniel). The first two, at least continued to live in Hawesville.

Before Pellville was laid out, in 1870; the area was occupied by William Temple, his sons James S., Robert P., and Wm. Noah, and sons-in-law Ransom Ray Gabbert and Joseph E. Bennett. By 1850 his son Cosby owned 710 acres of the Temple land near Baker (future Floral), and this was before the land transaction with the Shraders. For a long, time the main north-south street in Pellville was known as Baker Street because it led toward Baker.

The settlement of Pellville was called Buck Snort for many years, a good name for a rustic pioneer community. Pellville's noted farmer, oil man, and historian, Embert Barlow, speculated in article for the Clarion in 1968 on how the name originated. A pioneer family traveling the buffalo-Indian trail that led from Hardinsburg through Balltown, Pates Station, and future Weberstown stopped for the night between the knobs. After dark, the man's young son woke him and said he had heard a noise out in the thicket. The father asked, "What did it sound like, son?" and the boy answered, "Sounded like something snorted." So the father walked a few yards from the wagon and saw a big buck leap into the forest. So when the family decided to make the spot their home the next morning they agreed on Buck Snort as the name for their place. The explanation makes sense. This was probably after 1810, when the Indiana menace had largely subsided.

A group of a half-dozen graves near the north base of the Pellville Knob has been a source of speculation for many years, some suggesting they were Indian graves. A few years ago Mrs. Ernestine (Voyles) Barker told me that her grandmother had said the graves were those of a McCracken family. The old lady was Margaret Wells Bruner, the 2nd wife of Joseph Lafayette Bruner (b. Mar. 5, 1845), the Civil War soldier described as "Lafitte" Bruner in a burial record of Hancock Co. soldiers. Lafe had md. 1st Sarah Frances Miller, the great niece of my gr. grandmother Jett. Sarah's father, David C. Miller, Jr. lived for a time near Lafe Bruner and the Pellville Knob.

Lafe Burner had a large spring in his back yard, at the NE base of the Knob, and operated a steam mill there. At least someone had a mill there. Deed Book 31, p. 84, indicates his land was obtained from Lewis and Maggie Petri, who had bought the land from William Hale (b. 1787). This indicates that Hale may have been the first owner of the mill. Lewis Petri (b. 1861) was hardly old enough to have owned land when Pellville was incorporated. At any rate, when the town was laid out in 1870 the street running from the mill to the cemetery was called Mill Street. Before Pellville was incorporated the community was known as North Panther, according to the late Danny Lynn Bolin. The North Panther P.O. was founded in 1837, but was discontinued in 1839. There are no records on the community's mail service during the next 12 years.

Then the Blackford P.O. was established in future Pellville on May 29, 1851, as my great grandfather, Richard Cole Jett moved from the Beech Woods (Yelvington) to become the first postmaster. At the same time he purchased 687 acres from Thomas G. Noel, son of David D. The tract bordered the Hubbard Taylor tract to its east.

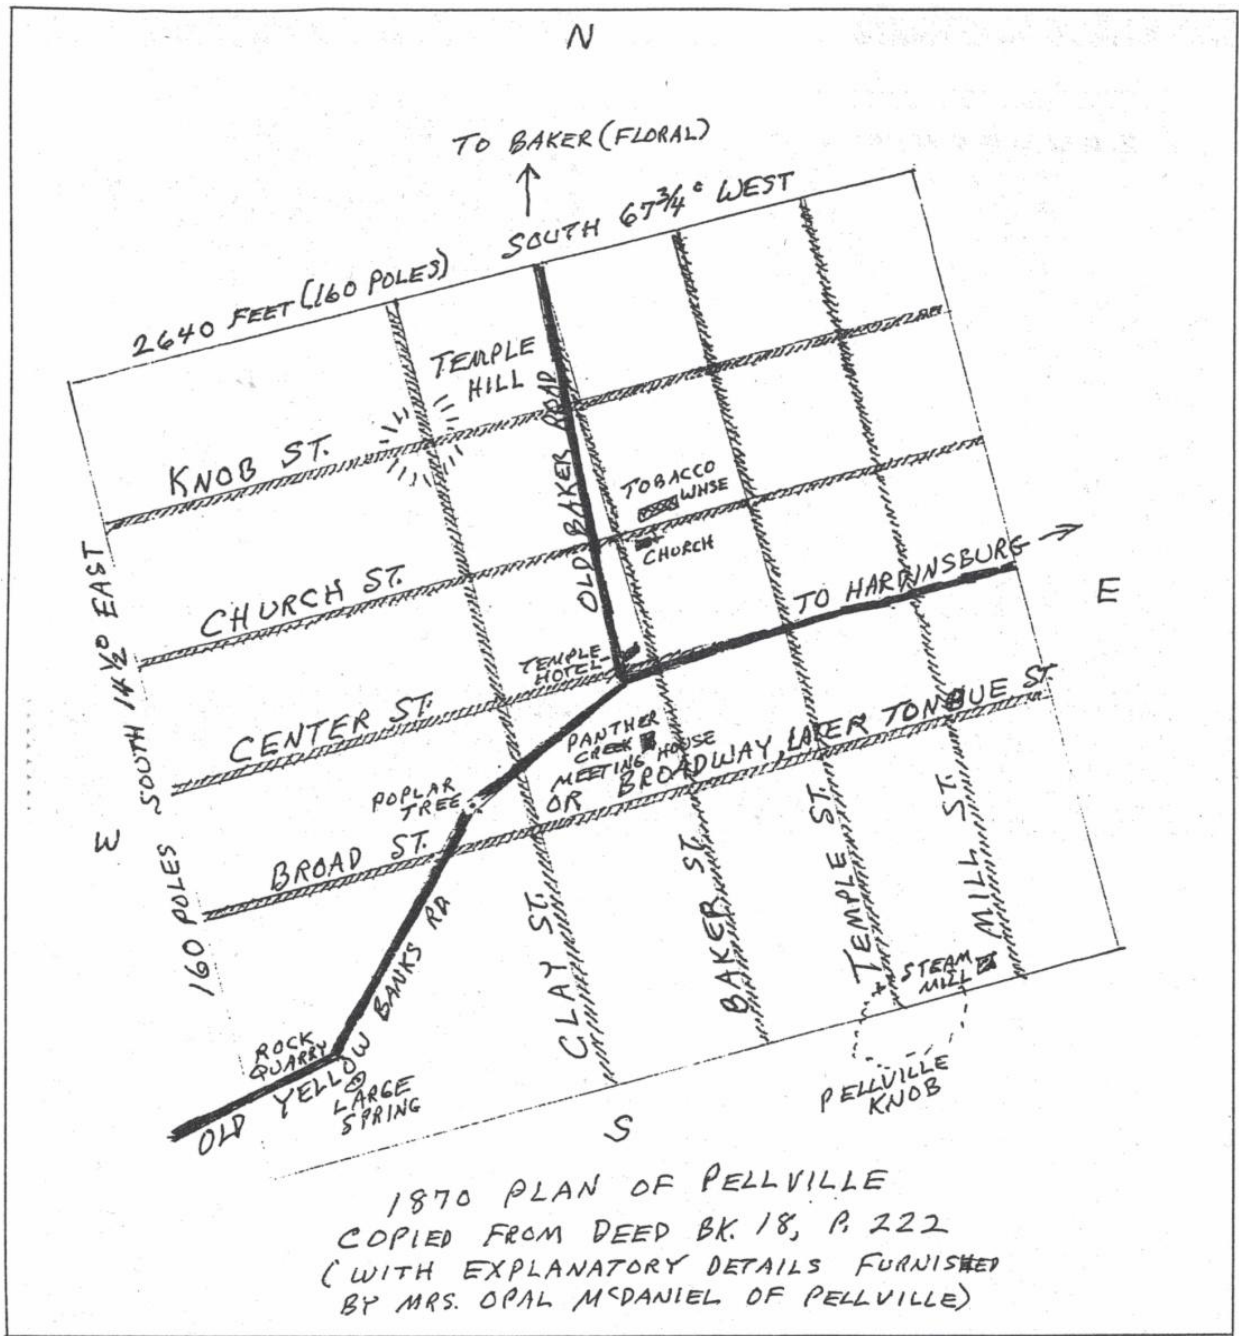

Apparently, the name Blackford was not popular with its inhabitants. Five years later, when the anti-mission Panther Creek Church branch in Pellville (Blackford) sold the northern half of its one acre lot on Baker St. the deed called the village Pellville. This soon-to-be-abandoned church occupied a decrepit tog building lying on the hillside near the future home of Pearl Stevens. The Baker Road that led near the church was for a time called the Hawesville-Panther Creek Meeting House Road in county road bonds.

No census, tax, or other records suggest that any Pell ever resided in the town, but the people began calling their village Pellville while it was officially Blackford, in honor of Lewisports Samuel B. Pell, the well respected sheriff of Hancock Co. from 1850 to his death in 1864. (Corroborated by records in possession of Mrs. Rose Pell Henderson, of Lewisport.)

The roads were still primitive when Pellville was laid out. Several deeds recording land transfers in early Pellville mention a poplar tree in the center of the Hardinsburg-Yellow Banks

Road (at a bend in the valley to the west of the town). The tree was apparently too large, and the road wide enough, to make removing it unnecessary for several years.

Pellville was incorporated on Feb. 25, 1870 by Legislative Act No. 392. The next day, James W. Snider, G.C.P. Baker. Sr., and Minor E. Pate, the county surveyor, were appointed to lay out the boundaries and draw a map of the planned streets and alleys. They were also to open a poll on Saturday, May 4, 1870 to elect five one-year trustees. James W. Snider was named police judge and Richard Jenkins became the town marshal.

The new town contained 160 acres, with the planned streets of Clay, Baker, Temple, and Mill running in a north-south direction. The streets to run east-west were Knob (to pass over the southern slope of the Temple hill), Church (passing between the tobacco warehouse and the Baptist Church), (the Pellville Church that had succeeded the disbanded Panther Creek Church), Center (coinciding with the Hardinsburg-Owensboro Road), Broadway or Broad, and a never-laid-out steam mill. Later, Broad Street was always called Tongue St., given the name by one of its occupants, Vince Newman, in tribute to his garrulous mother and other gossiping neighbors who lined the street.

The Baptist Church of 1870 had actually transferred from the Baker community. Its name there had been Bethany up to 1868, when William Temple and his second wife, Ann Barnett, deeded a lot to "the trustees of the United Baptist Church called Bethany, now situated at Pellville."

A History of the Daviess – McLean Baptist Association in Kentucky, 1844-1943, Rev. Wendell H. Rone, Owensboro, KY, 217-218:

Pellville Church was first known by the name of Bethany and was organized about the year 1839. Her first location was near the present site of Floral in Hancock County. This is the only information that we have concerning the Church until the year 1868 when she became a member of the Daviess County Association bearing the first mentioned name.

This leads us to go back to the year 1841 when an anti-mission faction from the old Panther Creek Church organized a Church in the village of Pellville. The causes of this split are given elsewhere. This anti-mission group flourished for a while but was finally disbanded in May, 1864. This faction had been known as the Old Panther Creek Church and had changed the name to Pellville in the year 1860. After the anti-mission group dissolved the Bethany Church moved to Pellville and assumed the name of the old group. This is the present Church now located in that Community.

Prior to her becoming a member of this Association the Church may have held membership with the Goshen Association as it was nearest at the time. The Church was dismissed from this Association to go into the Blackford Association in 1878 and is still in that body. She is at present in a very flourishing condition.
