Ohio County, Kentucky
Obituary Index

(1900-1919)

Compiled by

Jerry Long

The following is from the book, Ohio County. Kentucky Obituary Index (1900-1919), by Jerry Long (Utica, KY: McDowell Publications, 2009). The volume is the second of a three volume set indexing the obituaries and death notices found in the Ohio County newspapers. On the cover of the book (preceding page) is photograph of the Schroader Cemetery at Red Hill (Hell's Neck) in Ohio County.

This volume indexes the obituaries and death notices found in the newspapers of Ohio County, Kentucky for the years of 1900-1919. Other volumes of this series index the death notices found for the periods of 1873-1899 and 1920-1980. Approximately 39,000 deaths are chronicled in the three volumes of this series.

Despite not being a native of Ohio County I have many ties to the county. My father was born there and growing up I spent time on my grandparent's Ohio County farm. I became a student of the county's history when I embarked on a journey into genealogy in 1979. I have previously published several sources on Ohio County, including the 1810 to 1840 censuses, numerous cemetery listings and articles on various families of the county. I commenced systematically listing the county's death notices when I began searching the newspapers for the death of my great-great-grandmother. I never found that notice but I did learn a wealth of information about numerous other relatives and the history of the county.

I believe this represents a true history of Ohio County since individuals comprise the fabric of history. Newspapers are a time capsule and possibly are our most insightful portrait into history. I first began compiling this index in 1984. The Ohio County Public Library permitted me to check out their original bound volumes and microfilms of their newspapers and take them to the Kentucky Room of the Daviess County Public Library. I also borrowed other microfilms from the University of Kentucky and viewed them on my home reader. I went through the issues slowly page by page and year by year. I later rechecked many of the older years with the morgue of county newspaper files at the Ohio County Times-News office in Hartford.

While working with the old newspapers I was instrumental in the microfilming of seven years of the "Hartford Herald" (1875-1880 & 1885) that had never been available to the public. These first years of the "Herald" had been retained by the newspaper's original owners and were passed down through the Barrett family. In 1991 I visited Mrs. Lyman (Elizabeth) Barrett, who then had these original years and entreated her to preserve these valuable files by allowing them to be microfilmed. She subsequently donated them to the University of Kentucky, who microfilmed them and made them available to other repositories. I also came close to succeeding in having the first four years of the Beaver Dam newspaper, "Ohio County Messenger" (1930-1933) microfilmed for the first time. These four years were available only at the "Ohio County Times-News" office in Hartford. The owner of the newspaper allowed me to take them to the University of Kentucky for microfilming. When I first published my "Ohio County Obituary Index 1920-1980" in 2004 I announced that these years where soon to be microfilmed. However, soon after I published this the microfilming was suspended due to funding. I returned the newspapers to their owners and as of this printing they still have not been filmed.

Deaths Indexed

All deaths in Western Kentucky or Southern Indiana were indexed. Individuals who died in other locations were indexed if it was stated (or if it was known) that they were former residents of the above areas or if they had relatives there. Any and all items suggesting a death in the region were indexed. These included not only obituaries and death notices but also funeral notices, memorials, thank you notices, resolutions of respect, community items, erection of grave markers, references to attendance at funerals, accumulative lists of deaths over a period for members of a particular group (such as veterans or fraternities), decoration of graves on holidays and court or legal notices (such as recording of wills, estate settlements or suits, and appointments of administrators or executors). Persons who were mistakenly reported to have died or reported to be near death were also indexed; in these cases a note was added to the comments explaining.

Format – Abstract

Abstracts include all vital and biographical data about that person found in the original article(s) – date & place of death, age (20-3-5 = 20 years, 3 months & 5 days), birth date & place, cause of death, marital status, survivors or any relatives named, cemetery where buried, data on military service, occupations, places of employment, residences, former residences, military service, deceased family members, any data on family, marriage or when moved to location, offices held, memberships and accomplishments and other biographical data. African Americans if indicated are designated by (Black). If an abstract is preceded by a name of a city or community that item appeared in a community column for that place.

An effort was made to integrate all items for the same person. New items related to a particular death were not indexed separately but were added to the first entry made for that person. Many references to other newspaper articles about the individual or immediate members of his family that both precede and follow a death have been added to the abstracts. These additional items follow the obituary abstract and are preceded by "See also". These include a source code for the newspaper title (see list below), page number, section of issue if there are multiple sections and a brief abstract of any additional data. For example "OCN" 10-04-1942 p2C = "Ohio County News" 4 October 1942 page 2 of section C. Enclosed in brackets at the very end of many abstracts are references to death notice(s) about the same person that appeared in the Owensboro newspapers. These appear as [06-05-1894 "OM".] If the Owensboro items include additional data not found in the Ohio County newspapers they will appear as [04-07-1875 "OMO": Age 52. Resided Taylor Field.]

Word of Caution

Like all indexing one should not assume that it is absolutely correct. From my experience of studying newspapers I have found that they have numerous errors, especially the older ones. In fact I would estimate that as many as half of the older obituaries contain some error. For this index several gross misspellings of surnames (or multiple spellings reported for the same name) were changed to what was known or found to be correct. This was done so that they could be more readily located. All other information cited in the obituaries, however, is indexed as is. Occasionally if some error in the information, such as burial place, was known or proven by some other source, an accompanying note of explanation has been added. Frequently different newspaper items give inconsistent data or have information that sometimes contradicts other sources such as a gravestone or a family bible. In these cases one can only make an educated decision on the basis of the preponderance of evidence.

One needs to keep in mind that errors can also be made by the person doing the indexing. Since a name is not found in the index do not assume that no item is there. Errors are inevitable especially where the item is very small and there are very badly faded pages. Great time and care was done in the indexing. I believe that because of this my error rate is minimal and not many were missed. If you discover any that were missed in this index please let me know and I will add them to the database.

Possibly the greatest potential for error is the interpretation of the date of death. At times an item, especially community columns, may be a delayed notice and it is difficult to be certain what date is meant. For example when it says a person died last Saturday generally it means the Saturday of the past week but occasionally it may be a Saturday a week or two ago. I used the rule that if it was a separate item or if a community column was dated and it was stated that the death occurred on a certain weekday then the death date could be calculated and entered. Separate obituaries, articles or items reported in the locals generally were published shortly after a death and thus calculations should usually be accurate. However, if a community column was undated this rule cannot always be followed. Most entries that were confusing I tried to verify by another source and if I could not determine the exact day of death I entered that the person died on whatever weekday that was given. Another frequent source of error is the use of the phrase "in the __th year of his age". Many interpret in the 50th year of age to mean that the person is 50 years old. However, the person has not yet reached the age of the number cited and his actual age would be one less. Thus a person in the 50th year of his age has started his 50th year but he is still 49 years old. Keep in mind that funerals did not always immediately follow a death. In olden times funerals may have been months later.
